

BITCHES ON THE MOVE

1 LIN QUE

After rocking the world as Isis with the Blackwatch movement, then dropping two amazing solo 12s as Lin Que ("This is It/Rip it Up" and "Parlay/Let it Fall"), Lin disappeared for a minute. She made a brief return as a member of the doomed-to-fail 5 Deadly Venoms, who dropped the 5 when Lin dropped them. We can only hope to hear some new stuff from her soon.

2 MEDUSA

Just so y'all can feel her, way down there, Medusa gave a shot last year with the Do It The Way You Feel It EP on Goodvibe Records. She's been in talks with the Organized Noize camp, who would be crazy to let this Project Blowed veteran get away. No matter what happens, or who gets to be involved, it's inevitable that this talented woman will blow up.

3 NEB LOVE

Return of the G-Girl. Straight outta L.A., Neb will be dropping a compilation album in '99 featuring some of the best underground MCs out there. This Warren G-affiliated member of the Five Footaz (what's that all about?) should kick some ass I think.

4 T-LOVE

"Now that you know my name, you know it ain't about the money or the fame" rhymes T-Love, on her super dope Return of the B-Girl EP. In '98, this unknown (at least in Canada) West Coast MC kept it beyond real on this release with her show of absurd lyrical skills and we can only pray she drops another record on us for '99. Because frankly, now that we know her name, we think she deserves the money and the fame.

5 BAHAMADIA

She almost made it a few years back with Kollage, and has been dropping a few cameos lately with the likes of Toronto's Mathematik and Army of the Pharoahs. Recently signing to an indie label in L.A., expect to hear some noise from her soon, and if you're in Philly check out her dope radio show.

6 MECCA

I haven't heard anything about this chick in years, but I recently heard that the Digable Planets' Ladybug will be dropping a solo album in '99. We can only hope that she'll do more of what she did before when she kept it imaginative, and then dropped some serious shit with staying power.

FRITZ LE CHAT